The Dark Ages had no knowledge or vision that fillowing had knowledge, but no faith; while a the present day there is a perceptible tendency to ombine both. In the last century men would believe nothing which they could not comprehend, and the note is not extinct now. We have critical when of disciples, books are seed not have of disciples. and the race is not extinct now. We have critics in place of disciples; books are read not to instruct, but to be trincised: and men object to principles and things as not meeting 'their views,' without first ascertaining whether their views are enlighted enough to be worth meeting. The greatest men now are the most believing; and our poets are filled with faith and wonder, combined with free thought. To believe only what we can adventual, or what meets our present views, is infatnated foolishness; for no man starts in life with fall views, while the higher he mounts the wider is the horizon. It is possible for a man to with fall views, while the higher he mounts the wider is the horizon. It is possible for a man to he devouly, and yet to think freely.

"The tendencies of the age may be learned either by mastering its leading idea, and then examining its development; or we may examine the development to get at the idea. Prophecy also throws light on the subject; pointing, as it does, to the world's destiny, shadowing forth the history of coming time, and revealing to us the laws which he belief life. The Poets have indeed imbibed mach of the spirit of the Prophets, and many a passage in Hebrew poetry has its parallel in that of our own time. Poetry is the highest possible teaching for from it we gain the ideal of the coming time, and the direct principle, butter in the waters of Fancy and Imagins to.

It is a great mistake to suppose that art, science is in a great mistake to suppose that art, science to be people. The highest truths are cognizable by ill though the wise teachers will suit their dress and manifestations to the circumstances of mannuth requires not to be diluted to meet the popular and it has only to be presented in a suitable maner, and the people can master its difficulties, and mibedy it is thought and action.

True wisdom looks upon work as an appointed lang, as that for which we are intended, and with-fer it seeks not to reduce what is exalted, but to sieuse what is low; not to lower the best to the seel of the worst, but to bring the worst to the sight of the best.

The present age is not the small age it is repre-med, but it is one in which life is emimently estable. There is a contemplative spirit abroad.

beautiful. There is a contemplative spirit abroad, which watches all the movements of society, and mark the influence of poet, priest and philosopher spon them; and it is a wise thing not merely be live but to think of living—not living, as some an appear to do, by accident. We may be usualed to solve many of the problems of society, but there is a sense in which every man is the only bey to the past, the present and the future. There is no fact doctrine, or opinion of which a man has of all some period, had a thought passing through ha own mind.

There are those who would put a damper on the prelimess of the age by referring to the disappointment of high hope, and the constant fluctuation of spinion; but those who do so do not undertain the description of these changes, while they forget that the works of a truly great man can never

There is increasing understanding of the ultimate harmap of all things; and time will come when the busies dividing things that are not distinct will be made down. The remedy for that however is in their own power, in absence of all law, by insisting on prepayment, or security, or payments at short intervals. My object in this communication is to call the attention of tenants to an evil they all suder most grisvously from and to ask your opinion if they are obliged to submit to it. I allude to the practice of landfords to claim an anire quarter of a year to rent their houses in, should the tenant wish to move, and by putting a bill on his house to it in the muddlest season of the year, keeping your servant running to the door all day, and tracking your house from top to bottom by looking at it. Dr. Townsel's Sarsaparilla is a sovereign and speedy cure for incipiest consumption, barrenness, leucorrhosa, or whites, obstructed or difficult menarmation, incontinence of urine, or involuniary discharge thereof, and for the general prostration of the system—on matter whether the result of inherent causes, or produced by irregularity liness or accident.

Notining can be more surprising than its invigorating effects upon the human frame. Persons all weakness and lassinade before taking it, at once become robust and full of caergy under its influence. It immediately counteracts the perwientaness of the female frame, which is the great cause of harcomess.

Dr. Townsend is almost daily receiving orders from physicians in different parts of the Union.

This is to certify that we, the undersigned Physicians of the city of Albany, have in numerous cases prescribed Dr. Townsend's Sarasparilla, and believe it to be one of the roost valueble preparations of the Sarasparilla in the market. most valuable preparations of the Sarasparilla in the market.
